

Name: _____

Should bottled water be banned in schools? Research-Based Argument Essay

Directions:

- Write a research-based argument essay, convincing readers that bottled water should either be banned or not in schools.
- Be sure to use what you know about writing essays to take a position on the topic and back it up with evidence from your research.
- As you write, use information and quotations from the video and any or all of the texts you read to support your claim.
- Read the texts that are included in your packet.
- As you read, ask yourself the guiding question, “Should bottled water be banned in schools?”
- Underline the pros and cons of this debate. (Compare and contrast each point of view.)
- Create a graphic organizer, and take notes of the pros and cons. (Compare and contrast each point of view.)
- Take a position: make clear whether you believe bottle water should or should not be banned in schools.
- In the introduction to your essay, write a claim stating your position on whether or not bottle water should or should not be banned in schools.
- Be sure to list the titles of the texts that you use in your essay.
- Be sure to list the evidence that compares and contrasts the points of view to support your inference/claim.
- Write as much as you can, as quickly as you can. This assignment is due on loose-leaf. You may use several sheets of loose-leaf paper. We will be writing the essay in class.
- Use the rubric to ensure that you include all that is required to make your essay powerful.

- In your writing, make sure you:
 - Write your position/inference/claim in your introduction.
 - Give several examples from the text as your evidence to support your details/inference/claim.
 - Use your extended RACE organizer to help you make sure you are writing a powerful argument essay.
 - Use your rubric to help you make sure you are writing a powerful argument essay.
 - Use transition words to start new paragraphs and to introduce new examples from the text.
 - Use your Writing Prompts packet to help you write powerful transitions.
 - Use your Sophisticated Words packet to ensure that you are using powerful words in your argument essay.
 - Give several examples from the text as your evidence to support your details/inference/claim.
 - Write a conclusion.

- Use your COPS list to help you edit your writing.
- Check your writing for:
 - spelling
 - capitalization of proper nouns
 - capitalization of the beginning of sentences
 - punctuation
 - indentation of each new paragraph
 - interesting word choice
 - See the rubric for more details of expectations.